Reinventing a Global Brand

Digital Stage at 9.15 am on October 30th

Amanda Jobbins, the first global Group CMO for Sage, the enterprise software company with 6 million customers around the world, will tell the story of how she is modernising a global brand.

Sage is changing, moving from a loose coupling of companies to a more centralised structure with many functions, including marketing and communications, set centrally. Amanda will describe why companies have to think globally now and what are the challenges and advantages of a global brand identity. Not enough people know that Sage is one of the biggest enterprise software companies on the planet and one of the biggest supporters of small businesses – Amanda will set out how she intends to change all that.
